

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH

The horror of war leaves not only its ugly footprint on the warrior but also on the warriors' family. It is now documented that these families often suffer from Post Traumatic Stress Disorder. Frequency of deployments, combat assignments, combat related injuries and death often bring despair and turmoil to these military families. The death (KIA) or serious injury (WIA) to the warrior will reshape the entire family dynamics.

Teens-In-Flight, Inc. believes that providing free flight training opportunities for qualified teens will redirect some of their anguish from family crisis to the preparation required to earn a private pilot license and soar into the heavens above to touch heavens floor.
